MEET KELEV, ONE OF FORT WORTH'S FINEST

by Kelly Jo Nial

One of the best things about going to the neighborhood National Night Out party every October is getting to visit with new folks and sharing stories. Many neighbors bring their dogs, so I always enjoy asking about their furry friends because dogs are a great way to really get to know people.

At this year's National Night Out party, I met a very special dog named Kelev (pronounced Kay-Luv) who came with his partner, Fort Worth Police Officer Harald Cussnick. They live in Arlington Heights and wanted to participate in the annual crime prevention event because it's all about bringing together neighbors with crime and safety officials to strengthen the crime prevention efforts in our neighborhood.

Arlington Heights is Officer Cussnick's old stomping grounds. He graduated from Arlington Heights Elementary School, Stripling Middle School, Arlington Heights High School, and UTA before joining the Fort Worth Police as a patrol officer. Since then, he's worked in the Gang Unit, Zero Tolerance Unit, undercover in Vice, undercover in Narcotics, and finally in his current position as a Narcotics K-9 handler.

Kelev is a narcotics sniffing dog, certified by the National Narcotic Detector Dog Association (NNDDA) with advanced training to detect marijuana, cocaine, heroin and methamphetamines. Kelev is considered an official officer of the Fort Worth Police Department and works together with Officer Cussnick as a team. They are part of the elite Special Operations Division of the Fort Worth Police K-9 unit. There are over 1,500 Fort Worth Police Officers, but only ten are officers in the K-9 Unit. All the dogs in the unit can sniff out drugs, but only three are single-purpose drug sniffing dogs.

Kelev has assisted officers in recovering over $50 million worth of narcotics, $1.5 million of U.S. currency, 275 weapons, 175 vehicles, and over $1/2 million in property (besides weapons and vehicles). Officer Cussnick and Kelev have also participated in over 400 demonstrations at schools and community functions.

When I met Officer Cussnick and Kelev, I felt like I was meeting celebrities. I wanted to know everything about them. Officer Cussnick has been the only handler Kelev has had since he was 16 months old. After Officer Cussnick shared with me each new piece of information about Kelev, I oohed and ahed and petted Kelev, ruffling his ears more each time. A humble guy, Kelev seemed to understand what I was excited about, squinting his eyes and nodding his head, as if to say, "I know, I know."

Kelev is a six-year-old English Labrador Retriever. English Labs are smaller in size than American Labradors and are typically calmer in nature. Kelev almost didn't make the cut as a "police dog" because he was nervous around people, but his acute sense of smell kept him in the world of police work.

Drug trafficking is one the biggest issues facing Fort Worth, according to Fort Worth Police Chief Jeff Halstead who was the guest speaker at our October neighborhood association meeting. Interstate 35 provides easy in-and-out for drug hauling. As Chief Halstead stated, "The drug dogs are called out to assist on suspicious traffic stops. They are very, very good and quick at what they do." How and when do the narcotics apprehensions occur? Officer

Letter from the President

by Christina Patoski

Last week my neighbor came home for lunch to find his back door kicked in and two laptop computers, jewelry and cash missing. Home and car break-ins are happening way too often in Arlington Heights, considered one of the safest neighborhoods in Fort Worth. According to Neighborhood Patrol Officer Ken Jacobs, property crime figures for our neighborhood went down during the month of October to 7 daytime house break-ins and 3 nighttime car break-ins.

At the beginning of 2011, AHNA decided to make fighting crime a year-long initiative at our monthly meetings. In January, Neighborhood Patrol Officer Teri Majors showed a power point presentation, "How to Avoid Becoming a Victim of Crime", which emphasized lighting up your property at night and adding screens or storm windows to your windows and same for your doors to make your home a less desirable break-in target. In April, a roundtable of our neighbors shared their stories of how they became victims of crime. Officer Jacobs snuck out of one of the AHNA meetings to leave report cards on each of our cars parked in the parking lot, scoring us on the number of items we left in our cars and reminding us the best way to avoid having your car broken into is to leave absolutely nothing in your car.

"Protecting Your Property" was the theme of AHNA member Gene Reed's presentation in June. Reed, who has been in the security business for almost 30 years, showed us a variety of home security system options with an eye on affordability. FWPD Crime Prevention Specialist Kala Sloan came to three meetings to generate RAPIDS stickers with individual drivers license numbers to put on our valuables. Finally, FWPD Police Chief Jeff Halstead addressed the membership in October, answering a range of questions, including why FWPD changed patrol divisions from beats to zones.

We can't fight crime in our neighborhood without all of us looking out for each other. Twice this year police caught thieves red-handed, thanks to observant neighbors who called 911 to report suspicious activity while it was occurring. It's a matter of trusting your instincts when you see something that doesn't look right and equally important to call 911 immediately.

Finally, if you have a few free hours a month, please consider becoming a member of our Citizens on Patrol who randomly drive around the neighborhood at all hours, looking for anything unusual. Contact Captain Jan Bourne at 817-737-6019 to learn more about this important community program.

Cussnick and Kelev are requested by the City of Fort Worth Police Department, Tarrant County Task Force, FBI, smaller cities surrounding Fort Worth and have even been called in by the Drug Enforcement Agency in Dallas.

"There's work time and there's goof-off time," explains Officer Cussnick. On the job, Cussnick deploys Kelev to sniff out the drugs on the scene. One of the most important things is for Cussnick to be able to understand Kelev's body communication. When Kelev finds what they're looking for, he twists and turns his head around quickly and aggressively scratches at the area where he smells stashed narcotics. The two train together every week, with Cussnick testing Kelev's proficiency and his enthusiasm, quickness and ability to find hidden narcotics. Kelev is re-certified every year with the NNDDA.

I found it interesting that Kelev doesn't eat people food, ever. This is a crucial part of his regimen. He can't be allowed to develop a taste for it because if he is on a search warrant detail and comes across people food and eats it, it could be fatal since criminals sometimes hide drugs in food items. It is also important to keep working dogs on a healthy and regular diet. Cussnick has forty hours in emergency aid and care maintenance for Kelev should a mishap occur. Also, the City of Fort Worth has a dedicated veterinarian who cares for Fort Worth's Best canines.

Kelev comes from noble lineage. His father is Sir Bartholomew of Ledbetter, also known as Mint, and hails from Northern Ireland. Mint worked in two Olympics, as well as at Buckingham Palace where he was officially knighted by the Queen of England. Mint moved to Fort Worth to work as a bomb-sniffing dog with the Fort Worth Fire Department. Mint's daughter, Izzy, (Kelev's sister) initially worked at South Hi Mount Elementary as a therapy dog for autistic children and now works with autistic children throughout the metroplex.

All the dogs in the Fort Worth K-9 unit, including Kelev, are owned by the City of Fort Worth. When the dogs retire, their handlers are given the option to take ownership. I was curious about how and when the dogs are retired. "They will tell you," Cussnick simply stated. "They lose their drive and just don't get after it any longer." Officer Cussnick couldn't say it fast enough, "Yes, I'll keep him."

If I could, I would bestow an American knighthood on Officers Cussnick and Kelev. Until then, if you see them, simply say, "thank you and keep up the good work" and offer a handshake, uh, pawshake.

HIGH SCHOOL OFFERS FILM STUDIES CLASS

by Jason Sabotin, AHHS Honors English teacher and recipient of the "Best in Texas Education", an H-E-B Excellence in Education Award

At the end of my first year of teaching at Arlington Heights High School (AHHS), several students asked me why our school didn't have a class dedicated to learning about and creating movies. All year I'd made making movies one of the choices for English class projects, and the students had made them, and now they wanted a class that was nothing but.

I spent the next year creating the class, getting permissions, writing a curriculum, choosing movies to show, and so on. Finally, in my third year, I started a Film Studies class and it's been going strong ever since.

The first year of the class we were given a hand-me-down digital camcorder from our athletics department. I got funds for an Apple iMac for students to edit on. When my wife upgraded her Mac, we donated her old one to the class to have a second editing machine. A few lucky students had access to their own. We sold t-shirts to raise enough money to buy two new digital video cameras.

The Film Studies class receives no funding from the high school and the school district. All of our money comes from t-shirt sales or from our annual film festival, the Samurai Penguin Film Festival that we have at the end of the semester.

For the first six years of the class we held the festival at TCU in one of their film screening auditoriums which seated only 70 people. We always had to schedule two showings and both of those were sold out and overflowing. Finally, AHHS installed new equipment in their auditorium last year, so we were able to hold the festival there and could seat a lot more people in a single showing.

A couple of notable Hollywood folks have graduated from AHHS, including Bill Paxton who has gone on to star in many movies and television programs. Our film class met him in 2007 at the Lone Star Film Festival. Another AHHS alum, Marty Bowen who is best known for producing all of the Twilight movies, spoke to the class about making films.

Last year, one of our film students won the SXSW Film Festival contest for high school students. Many other students have gone on to study film in college, including UT Austin, University of Southern California, North Carolina School of the Arts, and TCU. One former film student is working for Fox Studios in Hollywood.

Today, practically every student has an iPhone that records video. It's hard to think about a school not having a film studies class. For the past eight years, we've built a reputation for having a quality film studies program and have had many students transfer to Heights to be part of the class. One of the biggest dreams of the program is for one of the students to have their own film made and their name in the credits. Maybe they'll thank me in their Oscar speech!

NOVEMBER THANKSGIVING POT LUCK DINNER

The 13th annual AHNA Thanksgiving Pot Luck Dinner starts early at 6:00 p.m. on Monday November 21. Central Market is generously supplying the turkey, stuffing and gravy. Beverages are donated by Arlington Heights Citizens on Patrol and Arlington Heights United Methodist Church. It's up to you and our neighbors to bring the rest. Take this opportunity to spotlight your culinary talents and bring a salad, casserole, vegetable, rolls, pie, cookies, or whatever else is in your repertoire.

This year's featured entertainment is the Harmony of Heights, a special group of singers from the Arlington Heights High School choirs, under the direction of Elizabeth Bogart.

You do not need to be a member to attend, so please invite your neighbors, friends and children to come. It all takes place at Arlington Heights United Methodist Church, 4200 Camp Bowie Blvd. (enter on Hillcrest).

LA POSADA IN DECEMBER

AHNA meets every third Monday of the month, except in December when we take a break from our regular meeting schedule.

If you're looking for a unique holiday experience we highly recommend Arlington Heights United Methodist Church's La Posada on Monday December 19. This colorful Mexican Christmas tradition is thought to have started in the 1500s.

The procession begins at 5 p.m. at Grace United Methodist Church, 4028 Calmont at Clover Lane, and features pilgrims dressed in Biblical-era costumes, as well as Mary and Joseph. The group and spectators sing Christmas carols and walk together up Clover Lane to Camp Bowie Blvd. and end up at Arlington Heights United Methodist Church, 4200 Camp Bowie Blvd., where food and a petting zoo, including camels and a donkey await. The popular family event, which features a live nativity scene, goes until 8 p.m.

The boundaries of Arlington Heights Neighborhood Association are the triangle of Camp Bowie Boulevard on the north, Montgomery Street on the east, and Interstate Highway 30 on the south and the west.

OCTOBER YARD OF THE MONTH

Nicole and Jess Price of 4013 Linden were selected as the October 2011 Yard of the Month. They received a $25 gift certificate to Archie's Gardenland.

by Gloria (Glo) Thompson

Congratulations to homeowners Nicole and Jess Price on having the AHNA October Yard of the Month (YOTM) at 4013 Linden.

Jess is a native Texan and Nicole came to Texas in 1996 from Pennsylvania. Both Jess and Nicole graduated from Texas Christian University (TCU). Nicole received her degree in Communication Studies in 2009 and is now working in hospital administration. Jess holds a degree in Radio, TV and Film and earned his Master's degree in Media Studies in 2001. He is employed at TCU in higher education.

As they were considering their yard last year, Jess and Nicole decided to remove all the plants that were already there and develop a plan. They contacted Smith Lawn & Tree Services who helped them with their landscaping plan and the design and placement of the plants and shrubs.

Jess and Nicole wanted a low maintenance yard that they could enjoy and enhance over time. Both Nicole and Jess enjoy being outdoors and working in their yard which also gives them an opportunity to get acquainted with neighbors.

Since they are first time homeowners, their interest piqued in seeing what neighbors have in their yards and learning from them, as well as doing some research about what works and doesn't work in this area.

Jess credits his father for his interest in gardening and notes that his father has a green thumb.

When asked what they currently have in their yard, Nicole and Jess said that they have a Shumard Oak tree and also a Linden tree which they felt was perfect since that is also the name of their street.

They also have several shrubs and Knock-out roses lining the side of their home. In addition, they have Spirea, Indian Hawthorn, and Chinese Fringe flowers. Other plants include a Nellie R. Stevens Holly, yellow Lantana along the front steps, Mexican Petunias and several Dwarf Yaupon Holly bushes. They also had some Little Rascal Hollies, but lost them this summer due to the weather.

When asked what fertilizer they use, Jess said, "Scott's Fertilizer." They normally water their yard and plants two or three times a week when there are no water restrictions. Jess uses Preen Mulch in chestnut brown.

With regard to pests, Jess said that they have Texas Spiny Lizards that live naturally there and remind him of the TCU horned frogs, although they are larger. The lizards keep most pests away so they do not consider them to be a garden pest, but rather a help. He also said they have many Monarch butterflies that are attracted to the Lantana and are welcome in their yard.

In the future, they plan to focus on their backyard. They removed a Silver Leaf Maple tree that was dying and decided to add a patio in back and to work on the soil before adding other plants or trees.

FINAL FLOOD MEETING REPORT

by Jessica Redman and Kathy Walton, AHNA Flood Committee members

The well-attended meeting on October 13 was the culmination of a year-long study of the flooding issues in central Arlington Heights. City Councilman Dennis Shingleton opened the meeting by telling everyone to take a deep breath and relax, that no one was going to be forced out of their homes in order to fix the drainage problems in our neighborhood. Councilman Shingleton introduced Greg Simmons, Storm Water Manager for the City of Fort Worth, who described the year-long process to find solutions that were effective, affordable and acceptable to all parties involved.

Burton Johnson of Michael Baker Jr., Inc., the consultant hired by the City of Fort Worth to conduct the study, made a power point presentation that included the solutions that they will recommend city staff to pursue. They include installing underground detention on Western and Ashland Avenues between Bryce and El Campo, in conjunction with street re-paving and utility projects already in the works. (Go to www.arlingtonheightsna.com to view the power point recommendations in their entirety.)

Another recommended solution is to install surface and drainage diversion structures in the vicinity of Bryce and Hulen where rainwater usually begins to pool. The city has already acquired the commercial property on the southeast corner of that intersection and will continue to consider acquisition of commercial and multi-family properties that are located where detention could be effectively provided and an acceptable sales price can be agreed upon.

Also recommended for more cost analysis and study is installing underground detention at Stripling Middle School and South Hi Mount Elementary School by installing storm drain diversion along Bryce Ave. or zig zagging through the neighborhood.

The feasibility study recommends that the city consider purchasing and tearing down residential homes that experience serious flooding from property owners who are interested in selling. More than 100 property owners who live in this area have already voiced their opposition to this by sending letters to the city ask for no residential buy outs whatsoever. One of the concerns is how to prevent real estate speculators and derelict absentee landlords from using a buyout program as an easy way to get rid of properties they've neglected or failed to maintain.

City staff counters that they will consider buying only truly flood prone properties which "are among the properties most likely to be poorly maintained by their owners anyway." Once a property owner agrees to sell to the city, they can't back out just because they don't like the sales price which is determined by an outside third party.

What will the city do with the properties they buy and tear down? They say they'll install acceptable secondary measures, such as turning the empty lots into rain gardens, or asking a next door neighbor if they are willing to maintain the property as a part of their own yard.

Councilman Shingleton closed out the meeting by reminding everyone that Mayor Betsy Price summed up the situation best by saying, "In Fort Worth, we build neighborhoods and make them better. We do not tear them down to solve their problems."

MAYOR PRICE RESPONDS TO OUR QUESTIONS

When Mayor Betsy Price was our guest speaker at the September AHNA meeting, she took questions from the floor, but was not able to respond to all of them without doing some research. She promised to send us her answers, so below are some of them. Her answers to questions about Chesapeake Energy's water usage and oversight of Conaster's construction of streets and infrastructure are posted at www.arlingtonheightsna.com.

Question: Most homeowners in the flood-prone areas on Western, Carleton and Ashland do not want to sell their homes or have teardowns on their streets. At least half of the watershed area is north of Camp Bowie Boulevard--why are none of the proposed alleviating actions imposed in that area?

At this time, our Transportation and Public Works Department is not considering the acquisition of any residential property within the Central Arlington Heights watershed. Instead, the department is focusing on how much they might be able to improve drainage conditions with available financial resources, using a variety of cost-effective measures that avoid any adverse impacts upon residential property. More specifically, the department is focusing on surface and underground detention on non-residential property and along streets. The department is seeking to reach consensus among the community, City staff, and engineering consultants on an optimal approach. Toward that end, staff assigns a high degree of importance to community acceptability as well as to effectiveness and affordability.

Question: Why are the alleys being mowed? How do we stop it? The City mows alleys to promote crime prevention and fire prevention. If your neighborhood association would like to request that we discontinue operations in Arlington Heights, and if our police and fire chiefs concur, then our Transportation and Public Works Department will honor that request.

Question: Will you join Council members Jungus Jordan, Joel Burns and others in support of streetcars and light rail?

Streetcars are not off the table and will be brought back for further study and consideration in the future. Commuter rail continues to be a high priority for the City. At a recent joint meeting of the City Council and the Fort Worth Transportation Authority (The T), both entities agreed that completing the TEX commuter rail should be the number one transportation initiative in Fort Worth. This project is currently undergoing environmental review while The T seeks federal funding.

Question: How can citizens access what other citizens are saying about redistricting?

Citizens can share redistricting plans with each other using the City redistricting mapping application which you can find under the redistricting icon on the City's website at www.fortworthtexas.gov. Staff has posted the responses on the redistricting webpage.

NOVEMBER YARD OF THE MONTH

by Christina Patoski

In spite of the brutal summer, many neighborhood landscapes rebounded beautifully this fall. Look no further than the colorful comeback in Debbie and Jimmy Washuleski's yard at 2309 Western Ave. "I fertilized in September with a 30-30-30 fertilizer," Debbie explains. "It made a tremendous difference, especially with the perennials."

When the Washuleskis bought their home in May 2009, they found an empty yard, except for a few large crape myrtles. Although Debbie had little experience gardening, she started digging. "This is the first time in my life that I've been able to garden," she admits. "We always lived on acreage, most recently in Burleson, where we had just standard shrubbery."

Debbie, who is a real estate agent with Keller Williams, drives around and looks at other yards to get ideas and then depends on Archie's Gardenland for everything else. "They are a wealth of information," says Debbie. "I do whatever they tell me to do." Debbie works in the yard every morning and finds it to be "therapeutic."

Her landscape is a mix of perennials and annuals, although Debbie says her goal is an all-perennial garden. Archie's encouraged Debbie to put layers in her landscape design, so she started with a stand of red begonias, a flat of which were given to her by a friend. Blue salvia, hosta, purple hearts, Mexican petunias and penta fill one side of the yard. On the other side are salvia greggii, yellow and white zinnia daisies, Knock Out roses, Indian Hawthorn, framed by two cypress trees. Potted mums add a dash of color on the porch. Her favorite plant is the purple oxalis bordering the front sidewalk.

This is Debbie's third season as a gardener and even though she doesn't know the names of all of her plants, she obviously has found her calling. "I'm thinking about making the beds bigger and then I'll be ready to tackle the backyard next," Debbie enthusiastically adds. The Washuleskis installed an automatic sprinkler system in the front yard this spring, just in the nick of time.

Jimmy, who is in the construction business, and Debbie enjoy sitting on their front porch to watch the visiting butterflies and hummingbirds. The two Washuleski sons are in college, so when the empty nesters aren't in their yard, they're slowly converting their vintage duplex into a single family home.

The Washuleskis have never lived in a neighborhood with sidewalks, "so Arlington Heights is so different for us--we absolutely love it," Debbie exclaims. "I always wanted to live here." Debbie and Jimmy who both graduated from Richland Hills High School "looked for a house in Arlington Heights for six months and the day this house went on the market, we put a contract on it."

Debbie and Jimmy Washuleski's yard at 2309 Western Ave. is a mix of perennials and annuals, but Debbie's goal is to make it an all-perennial garden.

In gratitude for the work they've put into making their yard such a beautiful one, AHNA is giving the Washuleskis a $25 gift certificate to Archie's Gardenland.

Proudly living in and serving Arlington Heights!
